

My husband and I both work from our home and strongly oppose the Consumer Bankers Association's (CBA) proposed weakening of the Indiana Telephone Privacy law. Before adding our home and business numbers to the Indiana no-call list, we were constantly interrupted by telephone solicitors. Allowing banks and credit card, phone, cable, and other companies with which we do business to make unsolicited sales calls to our home and office will not only be annoying, but more importantly, will interfere with our work. We ask that you deny the CBA petition to allow those with established business relationships to override the Indiana no-call list.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Wendy Fritzke
